Summary - My Childhood Fears

As a child, I was very afraid of the darkness. The street lights illuminated the clothes in my room and they resembled unknown beasts. Moving curtains and creaking floorboards made me imagine burglars and monsters. I was also afraid of getting lost, either on the bus or other outings. When I went on these trips, I'd stay with the leaders, as I wasn't adventurous. I was self-conscious so I tried to accept the fashion. As I grew older, I realized that darkness is lifeless, others will help when I'm lost and people will like me if I'm friendly and sincere.

jikara - he's blanket had been taken from her shoulders. Everything she did seemed to be wrong. When everyone was dragged but their chairs, she too did so, and sat down but the others were standing so she was embarrassed. When everyone started eating, she was so upset that she started crying.

Do: When the servants heard that their master was sheltering an enemy, they were horrified. Yuki, the nurse, declared that she would not wash him, so Hana had to do it herself. They felt it was disloyalty to the country. The sneak said her master was so proud of his own abilities that he was willing to heal any life. Even the old gardener disapproved of Sadao's actions. One by one, they all left the house; old servants like the gardener leaving because they never thought they would have to leave. Yuki requested Hana to eat her if the children cried for her. Hence, it was in great disapproval of Sadao's actions that they left the house.
Ob. People like Avery and Mr. Lamb need company so that they do not suffer from alienation. Such people are left extremely sensitive by their experiences. They need to be handled with tact and concern. They must be treated like ordinary people, as if nothing ever happened to them, and they are normal. People should not pity them, as it grieves them a lot. A friendly and honest behaviour is the best way to treat them. The best way to change their lives is to keep them cheerful and free from self-pity.

Dr. Martimer needed the service of Sherlock Holmes to investigate the mysterious death of his patient and friend, Sir Charles Baskerville. medically, it was proved that he had died of cardiac exhaustion. But his features were contorted beyond recognition. Dr. Martimer found this puzzling. He had inferred that Sir Charles had seen something that frightened him out of his wits. So Dr. Martimer decided to refer the case to Sherlock Holmes. He presented the facts, and after hearing them, the detective was sure that Sir Charles had died a natural death due to unnatural reasons.
Mrs. Laura Lyons was the daughter of Mr. Frankland of After Hall. She had married an artist named Lyons, but the marriage had not worked out, so she was living at Coombe Tracey with assistance from Sir Martineau, Stapleton, Sir Charles, and other charitable neighbours.

She confessed to Watson, and later to Holmes, that she had written a letter to Sir Charles. She had requested him to meet her at 10pm near the wicket gate on the night of his death. But she also said she never kept the appointment. When Holmes told her that Stapleton was married, she said that Stapleton had prevented her from keeping the appointment. So, she proved that Stapleton was the real villain.

My Friend, Gaurav

My friend Gaurav lives in Chennai. He will be at the railway station to meet you. He is tall and well-built. His skin is wheatish in colour, for he has been living in Chennai for two years only. He is not originally from Chennai. He wears spectacles and is well-dressed. He is friendly and sociable. His hair is a bit long, little above the average length. He has just started working at an office. He will show you the accommodation he has arranged for you. He is willing to show you around the city, so you won't be bored.

I hope you will distinguish Gaurav in the crowd.

Good luck for your exam!

Sub:- complaint for improperly printed book

Sir,

This is with reference to the improper printing of a text book "Vistas" for class XII. I purchased this book from a neighbour bookshop. When I returned home, I browsed through the book.

I was shocked to find that a few pages are missing. Also, the print is overlapping on some pages, such that I cannot decipher the words.

I request you to replace this copy of Vistas for class XII or to refund the amount for the book, to the address provided below.

Yours sincerely,

ARPITA

Sincerely towards Animals

These days, man is becoming more reckless and ruthless in his behaviour towards animals. Children are taught in their treatment of animals, as are adults. Earlier, man and beast would live in harmony together. Children were taught to be kind to our fellow creatures. However, the modern generation wants to dominate nature, thus creating disharmony. It is painful to see people beating animals to death, forcing them to carry extremely heavy loads and meting out cruel treatment.

The government must effectively implement the existing laws on cruel treatment of animals. Strict laws and greater fines must be imposed on people who mistreat animals. We are all God’s creatures. We one is greater than the other. We need to realize this. We need to teach others to be kind to animals. The need of the hour is to ‘live and let live.”
